

We are delighted to meet you through the Training Program of the Korea International Cooperation Agency.

Over the past four decades, Korea has accumulated a variety of development experiences in the process of its rapid socio-economic advancement in the aftermath of the Korean War. By sharing Korea's first-hand development experience, the Invitation of Trainees Program, now an integral part of the technical cooperation program of the Korean government, contributes to the promotion of human resources development of developing countries.

The objective of the training program is to provide opportunities for participants such as you to enhance your current technical and administrative skills, enabling you to apply them to your country's development.

In addition to gaining technical knowledge, while you are here you will have opportunities to deepen your understanding of the Korean people and society. We hope you will take advantage of this. Shared friendship and the exchange of ideas with participants from other countries are equally important to the goals of this program.

Welcome to Korea, the Land of Morning Calm, in advance. We trust that the program will be enriched by your presence among us and that your time with us will be most pleasant and rewarding.

We look forward to seeing you soon in Seoul.
